Delegates Find Much Work Still Waits For Them

Program Is So Comprehensive That It May Be Impossible To Complete All Details By This Afternoon

Higher speed will have to be put on in the convention of the Hawaii Education Association today if the program is to be finished this afternoon as was planned. The program is so long and comprehensive and so much agenda has been laid out for the convention that the sessions may have to be continued this evening or tomorrow morning was the belief expressed last night by some of those in attendance. There has been no lagging in the progress. It is merely that there is so much to be done and finishing by late this afternoon will depend on how much discussion there is today over the resolutions that will be presented.

Several changes were made in yesterday's program. Dr. Braley was not in attendance and his address was omitted. Vaughan MacCaughy's address went over until today and Mrs. Mowat's paper on English pronunciation was advanced from today to yesterday afternoon.

Dr. Emerson Interests
An outstanding feature of yesterday's program was the talk on child malnutrition given by Dr. W. R. P. Emerson and he supplemented it by a lecture last night at the reception at the Grand Hotel, illustrating his talk with lantern slides. He opened up phases of child health in the schools that were new to large numbers of his hearers. With the exception of Mrs. Mowat's paper the afternoon was given over largely to committee discussions.

Crowd At Reception
At the reception tendered by the principal's association in the Grand Hotel last evening there was a large attendance to a great extent from the teaching forces of Maui but with numbers of citizens interested in educational work also there. Early in the evening a group gathered on the lanai and sang Hawaiian songs for a time. Then came the reception in the lobby and there were a number of Hawaiian songs were rendered. The musical program was interrupted for Dr. Emerson's illustrated lecture which was attended by about 100.

Dr. Emerson showed various points that enter into malnutrition not only from lack of proper food but from late hours, poor hygiene at home, over work and over exercise. It was not so much lack of food as improper diet that caused malnutrition. Anxiety complexes entered and so also did physical defects. His charts showed the improvement made in individual instances and in whole classes. He also clearly showed how closely allied are malnutrition and tuberculosis.

Following Dr. Emerson's lecture Mrs. Louise Jones rendered two vocal numbers and Fred Butler, the singing evangelist, sang delightfully.

Today's Program
Addresses by Vaughan MacCaughy and Prof. K. C. Leebrik will be features of the sessions today, the convention having reassembled this morning shortly after 9:30. Superintendent MacCaughy's talk will deal with allying agriculture with school instruction and Prof. Leebrik will go into the problems of dual citizenship. Reports of the committees are to be rendered and some interesting discussions are expected.

Attendance at yesterday's sessions, aside from the delegates, was good though not so large as had been expected.

Liquor Pirates Seize Million On High Seas

(Associated Press)
NEW YORK, Dec. 29—A report received from Nassau, Bahama Islands, tells of a million dollar liquor robbery on the high sea. This is cited by customs officers as proof of the reports of pirates raiding liquor runners off the Atlantic coast.

The report from Nassau says that a vessel clearing from Nassau for Miquelon, October 31, with 10,500 cases of liquor, was boarded off the New York coast and all the money and liquor stolen.

Annual Costume Ball Will Be Gay Affair Committee Promises

Final touches for the Annual Costume Ball of the Maui County Fair and Racing Association will be put on tomorrow with the decorations in the Territorial Building, which can not be placed until then as the building is in use today for the convention of the Hawaiian Education Association. The committee in charge is making a little of a mystery about those decorations and will only say that they "will be seasonal and indicative of the New Year celebration."

There appears to have gone out a mistaken impression in some directions, the committee says, that all participants at the dance shall go in fancy costume. Nothing of the kind, say the committee. Prizes will be awarded for the costumes the judges find best as already announced, but fancy costumes are only a requisite for participating in the grand march and competition for the prizes. Dancers can attend in such costume as they desire and have as much fun as if they were harlequins, tramps, or what you will.

The committee also calls attention to the fact that this affair is an annual fixture of the Maui County Fair and Racing Association, one of the community affairs of that organization, and asks the cooperation of all members of the association in its success by attendance, at least for a part of the evening, the latter part, when the fun will be at its height.

(Associated Press)
HONOLULU, Dec. 28—Judge J. J. Banks today granted a writ of temporary injunction restraining the attorney general and the department of public instruction from enforcing the resolutions of the board regulating the conduct of and curtailing the activities of alien language schools which were to have become effective on January 1.

The writ of injunction is granted on the application of the attorneys for the Palama Japanese school who contended that the proposed regulation is unconstitutional, a violation of the American treaty with Japan of 1894, confiscatory, unreasonable, oppressive and unauthorized by legislation.

Judge Banks did not set the time for the hearing of arguments on the motion to make the injunction permanent.

Educators Disappointed

The foregoing Associated Press dispatch was filed in Honolulu at 4:40 yesterday afternoon and received by Maui News a little after 5 o'clock. A briefer dispatch which merely stated that the injunction had been granted, not specifying the grounds for the application, was received by D. C. Lindsay, Maui member of the department of public instruction.

Last night visiting educators to the convention here were outspoken in their regret of the action taken by the Japanese.

Superintendent Vaughan MacCaughy said he had hoped that the Japanese would have submitted to the proposed regulations and it was a source for real regret that they had pursued the course mentioned in the dispatches as he had hoped amicable arrangements could have been made.

Prof. Leebrik considered the action taken ill advised especially after all the work that had been done by the commission of Japanese and Americans that had preceded the passage of the resolution by the department of public instruction.

Commission Work Attacked

The regulation which the Japanese attack grew out of the compromise legislation passed by the last legislature. More drastic legislation was pending and the compromise was effected on the understanding that a commission of Japanese and Americans should agree upon a policy. The commission was appointed, the Japanese members by the Japanese consul general, and worked on the subject of regulations and of text book revisions. An agreement was reached but the Japanese community, most especially that of Honolulu, refused to abide by the action of its commissioners. On Maui the Japanese accepted the regulation after prolonged discussion.
